

Housebreaking Your New Euro-Snob

Americans are well aware of the requirements for the proper care and feeding of Europeans. For centuries we have fed and sheltered their excess population, nourished their famine victims and finished their wars for them. Always with the same result, the nose we've just straightened is now perfect for them to use when they look down upon us. What happens on a national level repeats on a personal level.

These revived WW II losers from both sides are again soiling the floor and positive reinforcement only goes so far. At some point these, as the haut couture set would call them, 'Le Nouveau Euro Effete', need to have their soil spot noted and given the traditional and polite nose rubbing. This again, goes for national and personal level.

The newest Euro-Snobbery is their superior European Union, the EU and its currency the euro. This union is based on the consistently failed socialist model which only rewards and increases laziness. The few productive EU states are having their life blood sucked by the increasing indolent welfare states. Meanwhile the replacement for Interpol, the Europol is baffled by the theft of 100 billion euros in fake carbon credits, also known as "Thin Air Certificates", more EU green madness gone array.

Regional snobbery is the currently accepted, politically correct substitute for the tradition forms of snobbery based on tribe, religion and race. In America, this snobbery is also manifested as superiority complex of the east coast, left coast and liberal city-states like Boulder and Austin. There is one primary reason that many chose to live in America's heartland. We do not like being surrounded and outnumbered by liberal loons and their supporting goons.

This 'better-than-them' snobbery is highly destructive. It is time for the collective human conscious to recognize and correct this congenital defect. That must begin with an understanding of conscious. Human conscious, if it is to form, does so at an early age. We are born totally self centered. At the time we recognize our own being, our own thoughts and our own morality we are still children, dependent of those around us who are larger to nurture and protect us.

We soon learn that the larger world is overwhelmingly threatening. Only certain locations are safe, your home, your backyard, your room, or in the case of abused children, just your own mind. This is the sacred land of the child consciousness. As we grow and expand our capabilities, we are able to better cope with the larger threatening world. But, conscious is still rooted in the recognition that there is a greater power and that there are selected locations that offer protection.

As we develop we receive constant reminders that actions have consequences. Touch a hot stove, get a burn. Jump of the roof, get sore feet. Prolonged contact with a hot stove will leave a lifetime scare. Jumping off of a too tall roof will lead to life-long paralysis or death. Thus conscious comes with these parameters, there is something greater than you, there are places of safety and of danger and finally, that human actions can and do have permanent consequences. These conditions form the basis of all religions.

Going beyond regional snobbery is the next politically correct and politically demanded insult to conscious, scientific snobbery. This scientific elitism rejects the previously mentioned conditions of conscious for a self-aggrandized position of moral detachment. This then REQUIRES that science is not allowed to consider concepts like a supreme being, punishment for sin, or the existence of a human soul.

Not all scientists have fallen into this blinding mental trap. Newton and Einstein were both undeniably religious, and both held beliefs that were life threatening. Newton rejected both the Roman Catholic and English Anglican misinterpretations of the Bible at a time when such thoughts were heresy and still punished by burning at the stake. Einstein would have been burned in an oven just for his birth, regardless if he had continued further and actually believed in Judaism.

Only when science is robbed of its moral roots in conscious, is it powerful enough to proclaim itself the leading moral force in the Universe. It is this perverse distortion of conscious that has allowed the climate science goons to dictate all human behavior based on a simplistic hypothesis and supported by a framework of lies. Climate fraud is but a symptom of a wider disease, the lack of scientific freedom.

But there can be no scientific freedom without the larger freedoms like free speech, free association, free movement and freedom of religion. I am a proud American, born into the conflict of pioneer spirit and Native American soul, in a place of sacred lands and future happy hunting grounds. I make no apologies for my spiritual connection to this greater conscious world.

I began a dialogue with the world two years ago, based at first on fighting the Faux Science of climate fraud. It has been obvious from the beginning that this fraud was just one manifestation of a far wider and dangerous defect. Human conscious and destiny have been hijacked, much like climate science and is being misguided for destruction. It is this greater evil that I have chosen to confront.

This article is a continuation of that dialogue and in particular, a rebuttal to unfounded complaints about my previous article, "The Vacuum Under the Soetoro Sombrero". I categorically reject complaints that this article was too religious, too political or that using Obama's adopted name is demeaning conservative rhetoric. Obama is just the last in a series of elitist puppets who are all unworthy of any respect due to the true creators and past defenders of our noble, if still unrealized national ideals.

Satan Steals a War Hero's Soul

Any serious student of science must also be a student of science history in order to place this evolution of thought into context. Soon this requires study of all history. In tracing the roots of Faux Science it soon becomes apparent that society is being manipulated and misdirected by Faux History in much the same way that science has been manipulated. Our nation is not now, and never has been perfect, but to be a rabid America hater requires a distorted presentation of historical facts.

The atomic bombings of Japan offer just such a distortion. The "Soetoro Sombrero" article presented a series of suppressed and formerly classified facts that supported these drastic bombings that ended World War II. Condemning America requires ignoring the history we would now be dealing with, had the suppressed historical events not occurred.

If the Japanese submarine I-52 made a successful arrival at Lorient and returned with its intended cargo of 550 Kilograms of radioactive U-235 then America would have faced Japan's dirty "bomb of now" on our mainland. Had the captain of the German submarine U-234 continued to Japan the same thing would have happened, even though a then devastated Japan would have been the only Axis power in the world.

FDR and Stalin had a mutual disclosure treaty on all captured military technology. To avoid this treaty the four fully functional, captured Japanese super submarine aircraft carriers and their ten accompanying aircraft were studied for two weeks and then sunk off the coast of Hawaii. These rumored weapons were finally located in 2002. With no knowledge of this information it is possible to misconstrue America as a nuclear bully.

Being an actual bully does leave its mark on your soul. The love dance that Japanese soldiers practiced on their conquered Chinese partners went something like this:

First capture her neighbors, father, brothers and sons
Then have them dig graves, then kneel, hands bound when done
After bayonet practice, the actual sex acts can start
And then ends with the Chinese girls getting stabbed in the heart

Decades of this brutality left the victims' hatred soaked into these twisted Samurai souls. In their own country these soldiers and admitted cannibals were never respected, only feared for the evil flashing from their eyes.

The brutality of one side soon reflected in the other as James Bradley so well documents in his book "Flyboys". The airman mentioned in my "Soetoro Sombrero" was Distinguished Flying Cross airman, George H Bush. By age twenty this real war hero had seen the Pacific islands and fleets covered with the skulls and bones of the warriors of tyranny and the defenders of freedom.

This once great young man returned to join a far different fraternity of skulls and bones. These Yale elitists soon twisted this young officer's soul. There is no question that America and her allies committed atrocities in winning an atrocious war. But, there is no parity with the level of evil on the other side. Germany invaded Poland with the Nazi-Soviet Alliance still secret. As Nazi invaded from the west, Russians entered to rescue the Poles from the east.

Not knowing the conspiracy, Polish officers and military assisted the Russian invasion and were soon captured and 22,000 were immediately executed. One need only compare allied occupation of Germany, Japan and Korea to understand that post war America was a better victor to those fallen nations than the Russians or the Red Chinese.

In "Flyboys" airman Bush was described as a post war successful businessman, director of the CIA, Ambassador to China, Vice President and then President. Impressive, until examined. The successful 'business' was a no-fail, cost plus, CIA front organization. His subsequent leadership of the CIA saw its ascension to the world's premier assassination, drug and illegal weapons running operation.

As nice as President Reagan was, he was overly trusting and an admitted delegator who only spent a few hours a day on running the country. Nancy Reagan was quite bitter over those below him who betrayed his trust and our nation. Reagan, none the less, took responsibility for the repeated errors and never held to account those who were actually responsible for the crimes of Iran-Contra, the Savings and Loan Crisis and more.

As President, Bush did cast a billion Chinese back into bondage when democracy was sweeping across the Soviet Blok. Soon after the Soviet collapse, the cabal of elitist filled the power void and stole all the resources of Russia, casting these briefly freed souls into first poverty and then reinstated soft tyranny.

Saturday, Sept 2. 1944, Lt Bush flew his Navy Hellcat bomber, off of the deck of the carrier USS San Jacinto and into the targeted radio station on top of the summit on Japanese held Chichi Jima. His plane was destroyed by anti-aircraft fire and gunner Ted White and radioman John Delaney lost their lives that day. One must wonder how those heroes would judge their pilots post war behavior.

Provoked Thought Produces Truth

History is filled with repugnant facts. Any thinking human is forced to confront the fact that there are both good and bad behaviors. Moral judgments do not require scientific detachment. Sometimes in confronting evil, one can get infected with your opponent's disease. The question that your soul will bear for eternity is how and when you chose to deal with your internal demon.

The elitist have set numerous traps for humanity in the past. They have many at present, but by far the worst are still just planned. An ever increasing portion of humanity is now awakened to this threat and chances for elitist victory in reestablishing there feudal society are doomed to failure.

My dialogue with the world is not meant to mold your thoughts, but rather to provoke thought. The internet has provided a forum where the petty snobbery of the past can have no bearing on debate and where appeals to authority recognize only one truth. For science that one truth is empirical and all around us. For conscious that one truth is that there is always a greater power.

The fact that there are moral rights and moral wrongs is empirical. The fact that a conscious mind requires a human spirit and that many spirits have combined to form a human conscious is undeniable. It is possible that the spirit of all of those past souls will judge each of us when this life ends. And while you may not take any material things with you from this life when you leave, what you DO here is yours for eternity.
